What the Children said about residential

This is another adventure which requires a lot of teamwork skills.

My favourite activity was crate stacking: - adrenaline pushed me on.

As I was coming down from the platform, I felt proud and glad that I did it.

I never thought I would climb, build a den or find my way.

For the children it's the most amazing experience; as secondary school teachers, we know it's the memories of these kinds of opportunities that they talk about in the years to come when asked about primary school. And as someone pointed out to me, not all children are made to suit the classroom, but trips like these invariably bring out the best in everyone.
